Winter Term 111....Spring Term 131....Summer Term 84....
Fall Term 109....Studying the Languages 57.

Vacations, Terms, &c.

THE Academical year consists of four quarters, of eleven weeks each, with vacations of a fortnight each, intervening.

The terms commence on the first Wednesday of September, December, March, and June.

There is a public examination at the close of each term.

The price of Tuition, is

For common English studies, $3.00

For the higher English studies, and the Latin and Greek languages, 3.50

For French, 4.00

Board, including room rent and washing, from $2.00 to $2.25 per week.

The books used in the respective studies, are, Adams' and Smith's Arithmetic, Pond's Murray's Grammar, Olney's and Woodbridge's Geography, Porter's Rhetorical Reader, Parker's Exercises in Composition, Newman's Rhetoric, Goodrich's History of the United States, and Ecclesiastical History, Worcester's do. Day's Algebra and Mathematics, Playfair's Euclid, Olmsted's Natural Philosophy,—Burret's Geography of the Heavens,—Comstock's and Silliman's Chemistry,—Mrs. Lincoln's Botany, Smellie's Philosophy of Natural History, Watts on the Mind, Hedge's Logic, Abercrombie's Intellectual Philosophy, Paley's Moral Philosophy, and Natural Theology, the Political Class Book, Dilloway's Roman Antiquities and Mythology, Milton, Levizac's French Grammar, Telemachus, French First Class Book, Andrew's and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, Andrew's Latin Reader and Latin Lessons, New Latin Tutor, Anthon's Prosody and Sallust, Cicero's Orations, (Folsom's ed.) Cooper's Virgil, Goodrich's or Fisk's Greek Grammar, Jacob's Greek Reader, Fisk's Greek Exercises, Greek Testament.

Lectures, Experiments, or Illustrations, on the most important branches of study are given each term.

The male and female Departments, while they are alike under the general superintendence of the Principal, are entirely separate in their internal arrangements, and united only in their recitations and other stated exercises, as the plan of the school may require. This connection combines, it is thought, some peculiar advantages, by bringing females, under the instruction of males in those branches, in which they have a better opportunity for study and observation.

In all the branches of study, it is the object, not so much to crowd the mind with facts, as to make the pupils think and reason, and form conclusions and fix principles in the mind. It is designed to teach the science, and not merely the rules of the text book, and to render the knowledge gained, useful and practical. The method of instruction is, to a great extent, inductive.

The Bible is made a text book of study weekly. Daily instruction is also given in the Scriptures. Every student is required regularly to attend worship on the Sabbath.

It is intended to pay special attention to the moral improvement of the pupils. Familiar Lectures are frequently given, to guard them from the peculiar dangers and temptations to which they are exposed.

There is connected with the Academy, a flourishing Literary Society, with a small, but valuable and increasing Library.

The advantages which this Academy possesses in regard to local situation, and the habits and morals of society, are such, it is believed, that parents and guardians will find it, in these respects, a peculiarly safe resort for those in whom they may be interested.
